SUMMER'S AFTERGLOW

I always have a good feeling after we've hosted a party. It doesn't matter if it's a small dinner party for which I've pulled out all the stops, or a large, casual get-together, the feeling is the same the next day. I'd describe it as one of deep contentment (unless something has gone horribly wrong like when I ruined a woman's outfit by painting some chairs the night before a backyard party, but that's another story for another letter). I usually putter around, putting things away, while recalling the fun and frivolity of the night before and enjoying the satisfied feeling of the party afterglow.

It's a similar feeling at this time of year. The summer is a chaotic, high-energy time that we all treasure. We try to pack in as much fun and recreation as possible, pushing regular duties off so we can savour every sunny day, starry night, weekend getaway, morning walk and cicada-buzzing evening.

I love the summer and all its crazy antics. It feels like everyone is collectively blowing off steam after months of keeping the responsibilities of life in check. But it can also be exhausting and carry its own stress with so many moving parts. Just like a party, it means pulling out all the stops (and the pool toys) and pushing ourselves to the max.

After this months-long party has come to an end and we're all a little worse for wear (and a few pounds heavier), it actually isn't such a bad feeling to putter around on a warm fall day, putting things away, remembering the good times we shared and basking in the rich reward of calling a time-out to routine, and living life to the fullest.

If we've enjoyed a wonderful summer, we feel satisfied and contented that we squeezed as much fun out of it as humanly possible. Eating as many times alfresco, braving early morning swims, playing with all the summer toys, consuming as much corn, potatoes and peaches as possible, and staying out with the mosquitos to watch the red ball of fire drop below the tree line.

The party's over and it's now time to reflect, be thankful, and bring order to our lives once again but not with a heavy heart. Rather with the knowledge that we made a heck of a lot of hay while the sun shone, and with any luck, we will do it all again next year.

LETTER FROM READER

Hi Cobi,

After reading your note in the Aug/Sept issue, I felt compelled to write. You really hit the mark. I had the good fortune of spending two weeks in Morocco and Mallorca in May of this year. On day two of my 10-day tour of Morocco, I found myself deep in the labyrinthine souqs of the old medina in F's.

I should say in advance that I wasn't planning to buy a carpet (!) but I was open to the idea and, having negotiated a price that I was prepared to pay, I bought a breathtakingly beautiful hand-knotted silk carpet. I didn't know it at the time but it's what's known as a garden carpet, so named because it's modelled after the traditional Islamic garden.

For the next two weeks, I agonized over what I had paid and wondered if I had made a big mistake. I live alone so money for non-essentials is never in great abundance. After paying an additional $700+ for shipping, taxes and duty (how could I have forgotten about those in the heat of the moment?!), I got the rug home. It is perfect. Whatever anxiety I had about the price evaporated when I saw the rug in its new home on the second floor of my 1920s-era house.

I smile each and every time I see it, representing, as it does, the trip of a lifetime, and the number one destination on my bucket list.

In your short note, you reminded me of the importance of living for today, not tomorrow, and embracing foreign cultures through the acquisition of things of beauty.

Thanks for a great read!

Cheers,
Jane

NEW BOOK CELEBRATES 25 YEARS OF DECORATIVE PAINT

British colour expert Annie Sloan celebrates the 25th anniversary of her unique decorative Chalk Paint with the launch of her 25th book this fall. The Chalk Paint™ Work Book will become your very own journal where you can paint, sketch, stick, collect, write and reflect. "I developed this book as I always use a workbook myself. I think painting and design for the home should be expressive and free so I want to inform and inspire, rather than dictate how a specific style or technique should be achieved," says Sloan.

The book is divided into six themed chapters of various styles, from Bohemian and Vintage to Modern Retro, where Sloan offers her personal tips about these key decorating styles. There are also six pocketed card dividers where you can store magazine clippings, paint charts and fabric swatches.

Annie Sloan's Chalk Paint™ Work Book will be available at book stores on October 15, $27.95; anniesloan.com

HPG GOLF TOURNAMENT HELPS FIGHT HOMELESSNESS

HOMES Publishing Group's 12th Annual Invitational Charity Golf Tournament was held at the Lionhead Golf Course in Brampton on August 18. The day began with a shotgun start and finished with a $20,000 cheque presentation to Raising the Roof.

On behalf of the participants and tournament sponsor Moen, Michael Rosset, founder of HPG and a board member of Raising the Roof for 14 years, made the presentation to Raising the Roof's Carolann Barr. This brings the total raised through the annual event to $238,000. "We are grateful for the support of so many clients, suppliers and friends over the years, for such a worthy cause as youth homelessness," Rosset said. "It is vital to find a solution with youth before the challenges become systemic and multi-generational." raisingtheroof.org, homespublishinggroup.com

TORONTO'S NEWEST NEIGHBOURHOOD IS A CIVIC TRIUMPH

The evolving Canary District development will push growth in the southeastern downtown core

VICKY SANDERSON

Common.

Design studio Avenue Road has become a design destination in the southeast side of downtown.

Prize-winning performances by Canadian athletes at the 2015 Pan AM/Parapan Am Games will long be a source of national pride and a cause for civic celebration.

Another long-term win is the way in which the Games hastened the rise of one of Toronto's newest—and most liveable, walkable, sustainable—neighbourhoods.

The Canary District—roughly bordered by the Distillery and Entertainment Districts, and the Don River—was the site of the temporary Athlete's Village, which was home to some 10,000 participants during the Games.

If all goes according to schedule, the Gold Leed-certified development will comprise 800 condos—a mix of market-gearred, affordable and fully accessible units—by the end of the year, with move-in starting in 2016.

The Rug Company, located at 415 Eastern Avenue, carries designs by the likes of Alexander McQueen.

◀ The Pan Am Athletes Village in the Canary District will see its first tenants move in by spring of 2016.

“...SOUTHEAST DOWNTOWN HAS BEEN A RISING STAR FOR A WHILE...”

— STEPHAN WEISHAUP, OWNER OF THE DESIGN STUDIO AVENUE ROAD

centre operated by Anishnawbe Health Toronto.

Restaurants, fitness studios and other services will be close by at an expansive retail promenade on Front Street East.

Nearby, the 18-acre Corktown Common park is as useful as it is handsome, with lots of flora and fauna, playgrounds, a splash pad, athletic field and open areas for games and get-togethers. Conceived by Michael Van Valkenburgh, the engineered landscape helps mitigate flooding from the Don River, making surrounding land more useable.

Tucked under the Eastern Avenue, Richmond and Adelaide Street overpasses, Underpass Park is a hidden urban gem, with Paul Raff's Mirage — an art installation of 57 reflective polished, stainless steel panels suspended from the underside of the overpass. There's also a playground, basketball half-courts, a skate park and a flexible open space for community events.

While the Games have hastened growth, southeast downtown has been a rising star for a while, says Stephan Weishaupt, owner of the design studio Avenue Road. He originally opened on nearby Booth Avenue in 2007 before moving to more spacious quarters at 415

Eastern Avenue in 2010.

“It's close to some of the other design studios on King East, there are lots of architects nearby and it's very accessible either from downtown or the Don Valley Parkway,” says Weishaupt.

At one point, the Yabu Pushelberg-designed building housed a printing operation. In order to handle the weight of the printing presses, the basement was filled with concrete, which had to be chipped out.

Hauling away a mountain of rock was, however, worth it. Above an artfully arranged ground floor sit two upper levels. Running the length of their outer walls, framing a light-filled open rectangle, are glass panels inset with display cases.

Museum-like, it's filled with beautiful furniture, textiles and objets—shown here top left is a gorgeous chair of salvaged wood and silky leather by Brazilian designer Carlos Motta. There is a stunning light fixture made with swirling wires of antique brass by Toronto-based Lisa Santana and Kelvin Goddard of Unit 5, a sleek bench of black ebonized wood and cane designed by Oscar Niemeyer, and finely detailed porcelain animals from Nymphenburg, the German company that's been around for over 250 years.

If all that walking and shopping makes you peckish, drop by Tabule at 810 Queen Street East for a fresh, flavourful take on Middle Eastern cuisine. By next summer, the restaurant will open another location in the evolving Canary District. It will have the same great food, but the vibe will be more casual, with lots of salads and wraps, available for eat-in or takeout. ♦

the roots of this couple's 1920s home

“We laid out a classic black-and-white tuxedo colour scheme through the tile work,” says Franco.

Our ensuite bathroom renovation took us from disaster to delight. The disaster? An incompetent contractor bungled the job so badly on the first try that the entire room had to be demolished.

The delight? Our saviours at Chestnut Grove Cabinetry and Design stepped in to steer our project back on track, re-building the room to give us the vintage-inspired ensuite of our dreams. It is now a bathroom that stays true to the roots of our 92-year-old house.

PICKING UP THE PIECES

Chestnut Grove’s master designer, and company president, Franco Giampietro, remembers the challenge his team faced:

“It was a tiling disaster by the previous contractor. The wall tiles were not straight, the wrong adhesives were used, the floor was not level, glossy tiles were mixed with matte finish tiles in the shower, there were no corner moldings anywhere, the window well just looked awful and there were major plumbing leaks that were already affecting the Chestnut Grove kitchen on the floor below. The ‘dismay list’ did not end there,” says Franco.

“So, at the end of the day, it all had to be torn out back to the bare stud walls. I assigned Joe Buompastore, a Chestnut Grove project manager, to work with me on getting the job done right and we created the classic Art Deco-style bathroom that Rachel and Bruce were so eagerly waiting for.”

THE BEGINNING

My husband Bruce and I were recently married. Rather than sell Bruce’s longtime home in Toronto’s Upper Beaches neighbourhood, we took a deep breath and decided to renovate.

The house is perfectly situated, backing onto the Cassels Avenue Playground, a leafy community park and neighbourhood hub. It is a short stroll to Queen Street East and the bustling Beaches and the emerging Kingston Road Village neighbourhood is also within walking distance. But, at a compact 24x24 feet, the original building gave us little elbow room for modern living. We decided to build a 14-foot extension on all three floors—extending the basement, main, and second levels.

In its original configuration, the house had only a single, narrow washroom. Our design plans called for an additional ensuite off the newly-expanded master bedroom.

The custom-tiled shower enclosure features flat, matte white subway tiles.

MURPHY'S LAW

Everything that could go wrong did go wrong. That massive plumbing leak caused extensive damage to the custom-made kitchen below. The ensuite itself looked dreadful. It was the nightmare renovation that everyone dreads—and we were smack dab in the middle of it.

That's when our saviours appeared. Chestnut Grove Cabinetry and Design had already worked with us to design and build our dream kitchen. Their team was ready to expand the scope of its work. Bruce and I took a deep breath, re-organized our finances, and hit RESET. This is a critical lesson in the home renovation game: Better to get it right in the end, regardless of extra cost, than to live indefinitely with someone else's large-scale mistakes.

HISTORICAL INTEGRITY

Honouring the history of the house, which was built in 1923, became the guiding design theme behind the entire project. We wanted our bathroom to echo the black-and-white Art Deco style of the original, single bathroom in the house.

The original bathroom had already been modernized (and badly) before Bruce bought the house in the late 1980s. But remnants of the original black-and-white mosaic floor and wall tiles could still be found beneath the floorboards. These tiles were a clue about how to design the new ensuite.

But first, the basic blunders of our first contractor needed correction. The Chestnut Grove team properly levelled the floor with a drypack application. An experienced tile setter then re-laid the floor, wall and shower tile using a laser level, a keen eye and a skilled hand.

"We laid out a classic black-and-white tuxedo colour scheme through the tile work," says Franco.

Bevelled black-and-white subway tiles now give texture to the walls, while flat matte white tiles line the shower stall.

"The subway wall tiles and black border banding also call up the old-school look. When accompanied by white porcelain bathroom fixtures with classic lines, the design brings the vintage charm into place," Franco says.

FITTINGS & FIXTURES

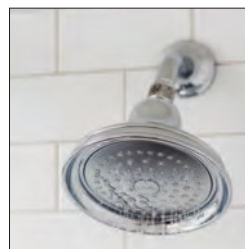

Chestnut Grove also advised us to get rid of the plastic shower pan from the first build. This allowed them to expand the shower enclosure and add the luxurious touch of black-and-grey floor tiles. The shower enclosure is made even more stylish with its Caesarstone seat and two built-in shelves in the back wall, both lined with Caesarstone trim and backed with the same tiles used on the shower floor. It all adds up to functionality and esthetic appeal.

We looked to TAPS Bath for our classic fixtures from Kohler's Memoirs line. These include his-and-hers pedestal sinks with vintage-inspired Rubinet faucets. Ikea came in handy with its vintage-style medicine cabinets in white metal with swiveling mirrors.

The standout of the ensuite is the custom-made Chestnut Grove cabinet built into the wall next to the shower stall. All in white, the cabinet design features subtle 1920s-style details. Three drawers sit below cabinet doors, behind which are four shelves. The unit provides ample storage for beauty products, bath necessities and extra towels.

The retro design of the Rubinet sink faucets work perfectly with the Kohler pedestal sinks.

The shower features Kohler fixtures.

The seashell-shaped hardware on Chestnut Grove's custom cabinet enhances the Art Deco feel.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW

One more unique design element is the picture window that puts a frame of bevelled tiles around the view of the treetops behind the house. The space also provides our chubby calico cat, Kestrel, with an ideal perch.

"My philosophy in design is focused on the clients," says Franco. "I help them explore and express themselves."

By working with a skilled design team geared to help us achieve our goal—and correct the stumbles at the start of our project—Bruce and I finally got the ensuite bathroom of our dreams. ♦

KIMBERLEY'S GUIDE TO

COOLER NIGHTS

KIMBERLEY SELDON

Strategic layers provide added warmth and soothing comfort. Toss a cashmere throw on the arm of a favourite chair, place an extra set of pillows on the living room sofa, or add a coverlet to the foot of the bed.

DESIGN TIP

If storage space is at a premium, it may not be realistic to keep several sets of pillows in the house. Instead, create a single pillow using two different fabrics—one for each side. Choose cotton or linen for the “summer” side and a heavier velvet or chenille for the “winter” side. Rotate as required.

EMBRACE COLOUR AND PATTERN

If beige is leaving you cold, introduce rich colour. Add a splash of cinnamon, chocolate, or lavender to rooms. A series of red vases down the length of a dark-wood table strikes a dramatic pose. Navy blue toss cushions enliven a dependable tan sofa. Top a plain white duvet cover with a bed “runner,” a hot trend in hotel design.

To increase colour's impact, introduce pattern as well. Do we dare? Oh yes. Large-scale pattern is turning up on upholstered pieces such as armchairs, sofas and headboards. Look to exuberant floral, exotic paisley and dashing animal prints to revive listless rooms and add warmth.

DESIGN TIP

Pattern has more visual weight than a solid colour, so it's a welcome addition to rooms that require warmth and depth.

TURN UP THE LIGHT

Clean the windows and tidy the landscape. As simple as it sounds, dirty panes and overgrown shrubbery restrict the amount of sunlight that penetrates windows. If you're remodeling or building from scratch, choose a window that allows wash-from-within rotations to make this task easier.

Introduce mirrors to visually expand space and bring sunshine indoors.

DESIGN TIP

Paint windowsills and surrounds in a light-reflecting colour such as ivory, cream, and white to bounce sunlight into rooms. ♦

Summer is over and that can only mean one thing... it's about to get cooler. Being a native southern Californian, I find the very idea of winter daunting. On the other hand, there is no place I'd rather be from October to February than nestled comfortably in my country house with a cup of cocoa in my hands and a good book in my lap. In anticipation of shorter nights, cooler temperatures and winter cocooning, here are some simple ways to warm up your interiors.

ADD LAYERS

Shortly after Labour Day we dig out our scarves, gloves and topcoats in anticipation of colder weather and new fall fashions. This “bundling up” process is equally warranted when it comes to our interiors. After all, we may love that light, fresh and breezy feeling in July but we recognize we need something more substantial for the winter months ahead.

{TEEN ZONE}

A teenager's bedroom accommodates present and future needs while reflecting personal style

BY KATE DAVIDSON

PHOTOGRAPHY BY STEPHANI BUCHMAN

A teen bedroom has a lot of territory to cover; it must accommodate a variety of activities while addressing future growth needs. To achieve this, it is important to create a multifunctional room. So much happens in this space—studying, reading, music, hobbies, hanging out with friends, fashion shows, sleepovers, quiet time—and the bedroom must be able to adapt to these shifting priorities. It must be a place of comfort, while reflecting the teen's style as an extension of their personality.

A successful layout for a teen's room involves creating several zones. When 13-year-old Jessica asked for a room with blues and purples, and for it to be feminine but not too "girly," I knew we had a fun project where we could infuse colour, pattern and texture.

DESIGN THRESHOLD

As a point of departure, we started with this fabulous wallpaper from JF Fabrics. It has several colours and texture to play with and immediately creates a wow-factor in the space. When decorating a room, using a source of inspiration will really help ensure your room flows. It could be a fabric, rug, piece of art or, as in this case, wallpaper.

On the walls, we added a twist to a classic style. Adding a chair rail, we painted the bottom portion white and wallpapered the upper portion for a dramatic effect. We kept the ceiling classic white and installed a whimsical and pretty shell chandelier.

We placed the bed across from the door to the room on the far wall with a bench at its foot, adding a pop of royal blue in an ikat-influenced onion pattern.

We added some easy glam to Jessica's old desk by topping it with a custom-cut mirror and embellishing it with crystal knobs. The homeowner had an antique armchair that was not being used so we had it painted and reupholstered. Now it's a character piece. On the wall above the desk, we hung a shelf and corkboard, providing a home for her collectables.

WINDOW DRESSING

The window's existing bench seat was finished with a stylish croc vinyl in metallic grey and then complemented with an eclectic mix of pillows in different colours and patterns that all coordinate with the wallpaper scheme.

Using an adorable Kravet fabric for the window treatment, we had a custom valance made with a gentle curve and pretty box pleats. And for room darkening, we didn't go custom; instead a blackout waterfall roman shade was installed behind the valance. Machine-made blinds are more durable and easy to operate versus custom-fabric roman shades, and also more cost-effective.

This bedroom is fun and vibrant while still being classic and elegant. The delightful space will grow with her throughout her teen years. ♦

FAMILY affair

How a designer maximizes the space and function in a small family bathroom

BY KATIE CAMPBELL • PHOTOGRAPHY BY MICHELLE PEEK

The family bathroom is arguably the most-used room in a home. It has to function for everyone, from kids to parents and sometimes guests. In order to meet the needs of a wide range of people, a custom and well-thought-out design is integral.

This bathroom, designed for a family of five in the Lorne Park neighbourhood of Mississauga, did not have size on its side. There was not a lot of room to play with the overall layout, so in terms of space planning and budget, the fixture locations were kept in tact and budget was re-directed to custom storage and finish details.

There are always ways to save and splurge in a bathroom, and the biggest splurge here is custom cabinetry.

THE MUST-HAVES

Given the number of people using the bathroom, having two sinks, plenty of storage and a shower/bathtub combination was key. The bathtub and toilet run along the one side separated by a half-wall and frosted-glass feature divider. The frosted glass allows light through into the shower area, but blocks the toilet from view. The entire length of the opposite wall is used for a vanity and storage.

There are always ways to save and splurge in a bathroom, and the biggest splurge here is custom cabinetry. Having two sinks was non-negotiable with three children. The custom vanity has two large sink cabinets and three drawers in the centre—one for each child to keep their personal belongings.

Toward the entry door, there is a full-height linen tower that is set back a few inches to give the feeling of more space at the doorway. Given the overall height, there is an open nook at the top for towels or decorative items, as this area is not as functional for everyday use.

There are two large doors that open up to adjustable shelving for linens and toiletries. Below are two larger drawers for mom and dad to keep their bathroom products, followed by full-width deeper drawers.

The linen tower is finished with a furniture base so that it feels like a custom piece that could stand alone. For practicality, there is a toe-kick setback behind the furniture base so it doesn't become a dust trap below.

PRACTICAL SOLUTIONS

The storage is doubled in the bathroom, but of equal importance are the materials used to ensure that this bathroom would be family-friendly and stand the test of time.

The vanity countertop is a marble look, but is actually a quartz product. Quartz is extremely durable and easy to clean. There is a three-inch quartz backsplash installed around the edges to protect the walls and cabinetry from splashes.

The flooring is a porcelain tile, made to look like Calacatta marble, but with no maintenance. To make it feel more special and custom, it is installed in a herringbone pattern. The smaller scale tile in a honed finish eliminates opportunity for slipping on wet floors, with more grout lines and no sheen.

In the shower the same quartz was used to create shower niches and a pony wall with a frosted-glass feature divider. The shower walls are clad in a grey subway tile with an easy-to-wipe glossy finish. To create interest without a huge investment, and to satisfy the adults' taste, there is a mother-of-pearl mosaic band to highlight the shower niches.

The client really wanted a white and clean bathroom, but marble was out of the budget and the maintenance over time was something that this busy family knew was not realistic. Marble alternatives that are durable and beautiful give them the clean esthetic they desired at a more affordable price.

A light grey ivory is sprayed on the vanity cabinets and the walls have subtle contrast in an even lighter ivory. A hint of teal is added through a custom roman shade and framed photography for a serene spa feel.

A TOUCH OF LUXURY

Beautiful lighting in wall sconces above the vanity is the final touch. For everyday use, the linear sconces above the mirrors are perfect, while the gorgeous polished-nickel, shaded sconce in the middle is the perfect layer for applying makeup.

Mother-of-pearl round mirrors provide contrast to the hard edges in the space and reference the shower tile. Even the little details such as light-white bronze cabinet hardware were selected with care. They are the perfect little jewel on the simple cabinet design and are easy for little hands to use.

The bathroom was dark, dated and lacked functional storage, but its bright white palette and custom solutions make the room feel larger and give every family member a place. ♦

MARBLE ALTERNATIVES

Marble is a beautiful and luxurious finish option, but is not a practical option for some homeowners due to the ongoing maintenance required. Here are a few alternatives to consider when you want the clean, fresh look of marble but with little to no upkeep.

- QUARTZ Can be used in a number of applications, but most often for countertops in kitchens or bathrooms. The primary ingredient is quartz, combined with polyester resins and pigments to give it colour. Quartz is stain- and scratch-resistant, and most importantly is non-porous. (Used as vanity countertop, knee-wall ledge and shower niche boxes).

- PORCELAIN Porcelain is a dense, hard surface that is known for being used in tile applications for flooring and walls. The possibilities are endless these days, with some marble look-alikes that are extremely realistic and require zero maintenance. Also, when installed in a herringbone pattern (as seen in this bathroom's flooring), you get a really custom high-end look for a fraction of the cost.

- SOLID SURFACE Solid-surface countertops, such as Corian, are made of acrylic that is durable and low-maintenance for years. They resist stains, moisture and repel the growth of mould and bacteria. They come in a wide variety of finishes, including some that mimic the look of natural stone.

FURNITURE BANK—

Your Used Furniture Will Change a Life

One evening a lady named Sister Anne Schenck was invited to the apartment of a family of five for dinner. When she arrived, she found a home furnished with a milk crate used as a table, and a pot in which the dinner was cooked and served in. She learned that her hosts ate and slept on the floor.

On her way back home that evening, she came upon a gently used sofa that had been left out at the curb for disposal. That encounter, over 17 years ago, spawned a movement—one that facilitates the transfer of furniture from individuals disposing of gently used items to homes in need of them.

Furniture Bank tackles issues surrounding poverty and homelessness by ensuring those

a FRESH START

Lost in the '80s, this lakeside condo ensuite now boasts sophisticated 21st-century finishes

Overlooking the shores of Lake Ontario in downtown Toronto, this condominium was originally built in the early '80s, and featured finishes that were considered luxurious back then. Though the client appreciated the dated luxury, which was present in the master ensuite bathroom when he bought the property, he wanted the home to express his sophisticated lifestyle as well as provide him with added functionality and modern amenities.

The first step was to glean all the information possible to understand the homeowner's needs for the space. Every room had already been stylishly updated and decorated with a modern and masculine style. The final frontier was the master ensuite, which meant the luxury look of the '80s had to go to match the rest of the home.

BY EVELYN ESHUN • PHOTOGRAPHY BY LARRY ARNAL

CONDO COMPLICATIONS

The challenges of renovating in a condo are multiple, including the inability to easily move plumbing fixtures, install pot lights and freely work during certain hours. These restrictions are even more challenging when tasked with a short timeline. In this case, the massive transformation had to happen between 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., within a six-to-eight week time frame.

Tradespeople normally begin at a jobsite as the sun comes up. As the job proceeds, it is critical to schedule, in proper sequence, the various installations. For instance, one can't install a faucet until the counter is completed and the tub can't be installed until the flooring is fully installed.

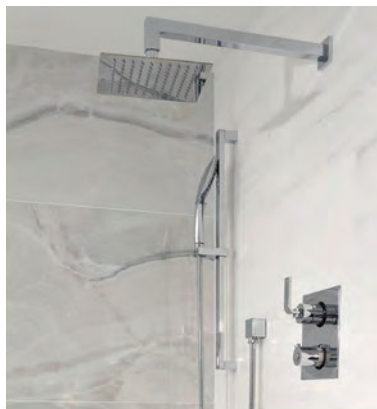

The timing of trades can bring a whole job to a halt if not executed correctly. Any number of things can happen to delay progress: damaged product, a sickness in the crew, a major holiday. Despite the challenges, we squeaked in under the wire and completed this project successfully.

COLOUR AND CONTRAST

My goal was to pay attention to the pleasures of mind and body when designing this lavish bathroom. The homeowner's active and luxurious lifestyle prompted me to choose exotic finishes such as high-lacquered paint and smoked eucalyptus wood for the vanities and a floor-to-ceiling storage tower, which brings a wonderful element of texture to the generally smooth and sleek space.

The original plan for the tower was to have a laundry bin available in the bottom half and shelving above; however, a plumbing stack tucked along the wall did not allow for this. Plan B was to create a generous amount of storage in the tower with shelves, and plugs for various grooming tools.

Contrasting the variegated texture of the storage tower with the gleaming high-gloss white finish of the floating vanities created the dramatic and contemporary look we were after. Adding LED-rope lights under these floating vanities

TIPS

A lever faucet offers easier access when you have a full face of soap.

A vanity with full pullout drawers provides easier access to all your products.

amps up the wow-factor dramatically in this gentleman's ensuite. The option to dim and alter the colour of the light glowing from under the vanities allows for control of the ambiance of the space.

The first element chosen for the renovation was a generously sized 36x24-inch imported Italian tile. Subsequently, the colour scheme was inspired by the tiles that provide the illusion of movement and emulate the look of a solid slab, which would have been a more costly and challenging installation choice. The centrepiece of this bathroom is a freestanding tub with very simple lines atop a platform, created in order to redirect some plumbing.

WATER WORKS

The shower remains in its existing location and flanks the tub area. To make it feel more contemporary, a linear drain was used on the shower floor and a five-foot-long linear niche was created to amplify the horizontal elements of the design. Of course, a bathroom discussion always includes the toilet, which has been discreetly hidden in a room of its own.

This renovation had its challenges but our design solutions successfully transformed the '80s bathroom into a contemporary and classic space that adds value and enjoyment to the homeowner's daily life. ♦

MASTERING THE ART OF AGING

BY GLEN PELOSO & JAMIE ALEXANDER • PHOTOGRAPHY BY LARRY ARNAL

A luxuriously updated condo ensuite with some smart forward-thinking design features

Who says that “open concept” has to be reserved for kitchens and family rooms? There is no need for the bathroom to be segregated into smaller areas either. It used to be that bathrooms were just that: a room to bathe in. While the luxury of a master bathroom has become more important, sometimes an open-concept bathroom with a large “wet area” can provide both function and luxury as it did for these homeowners.

They bought an older condo in the city, mainly because it provided them with the square footage they wanted with all the conveniences. While they were both still young and working, they were also getting closer to the retirement years. A condo that provided them with a life lived on one floor, with no exterior maintenance, seemed ideal.

HUMBLE BEGINNINGS

The master bathroom in their new unit was nothing they hoped for—a large built-in bathtub, a small shower, and a toilet between them. The vanity area was in an adjacent room divided by a wall. We knew this would have to be completely rethought in order to work for them; remembering the plumbing locations could not change so as not to affect the condo units above and below.

THE MASTER PLAN

We decided to extend the room to include the vanity and water closet areas, and to rework all of the elements. Figuring out the locations of the major features, like shower, vanity, toilet and tub, were going to be paramount to the success of the project.

Before we decided on the finishes or the fixtures, we knew that we would be better off creating a complete wet room, which would allow us to work with the existing plumbing structures. The built-in tub was removed to make room for the new shower locations. A standalone tub was installed in place of the shower. The drains and water supply existed for both, so we used them in a different way. The vanity occupies the same space it had before and the toilet is a water closet just off the main bathroom.

BATH TO THE FUTURE

We now had a very large shower area that we could make luxurious, not just because of its size. We could also make it barrier-free by using a strip drain that sits close to the tub; the shower required no curb to contain the water. The slant of the tiles would lead the water to the strip drain to be taken away. Although not currently necessary (or ever, hopefully), should either one require mobility assistance in the future, a walker or wheel chair could be rolled directly into the shower with no barriers.

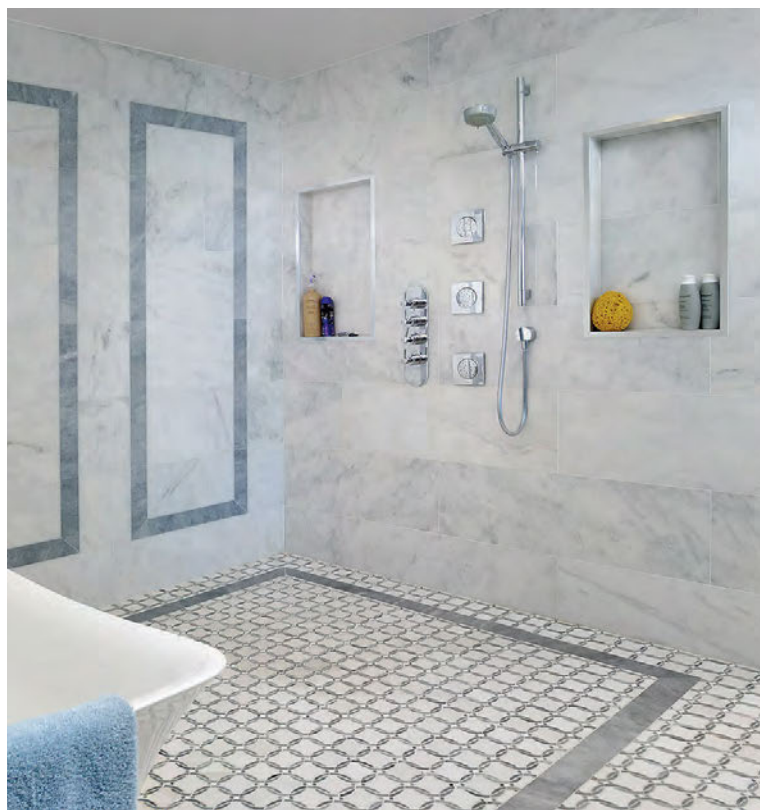

To make the entire area water-worthy, we selected a larger-format marble tile for the walls and mimicked the floor detail to provide character. The mosaic marble floor provides a beautiful pattern and adds some grip to avoid a slippery shower.

All the walls of the room are covered in marble and the tub, with its gentle architectural line, was placed on the far side of the wet area. The shower head was mounted directly into the ceiling to provide an experience that mimics being in a heavy rain. Body jets were also installed for added relaxation and a hand-held for easy clean up or should either need assistance in the shower.

The vanity was custom built to provide both homeowners with a generous surface area, undermount sinks and storage mirrors. The interior of the vanity has roll-out shelves, not only to maximize the storage capacity but also to recognize that bending down may become more difficult at some point in their lives. The wall behind the vanity was also tiled; however, the shower water never reaches that part of the bathroom.

A water closet was created for the toilet just beyond the tub. We recognized that it would be used for those “middle of the night” trips to the bathroom, which become more regular with age. We created a light valence between the wet area and the vanity and added a motion-detected strip light. The whole room gets a warm glow at night, which allows you to see your way, but is soft enough not to interrupt the sleep in the master bedroom.

Everyone wants to have an open-concept living area; however, an open-concept master bathroom provides not only luxury and class but function that will serve for years to come. ♦

the BIG and SMALL of it

SAMANTHA SANNELLA

Whether a bathroom is large or slight, there are many choices to make it just right

From large and luxurious to small and contemporary, the design of your bathroom should be an oasis for relaxation and renewal or a place to energize you and help you face the day. Through fixtures, vanities, stone, tile and colour, you can let your imagination run wild and make your bathroom a distinctive addition to your home.

LUXURIOUS
+ GRAND

*The marble floor is detailed with

When creating this luxury bathroom, we decided to make the space feel contemporary, yet relaxing, through the use of marble, natural light and warm wood.

The marble floor is detailed with a custom inset herringbone pattern. This change in pattern helps to combat the slipperiness of the polished marble and adds interest to the large floor space. At nearly 400 square feet, this bathroom features a solid-surface, freestanding 72-inch tub, a luxury dual bathroom vanity made of solid ash wood by GODI, and a TOTO toilet and bidet.

The GODI vanity, which is part of the Dancing Room series, is accessorized with side cabinets, matching mirror, crystal flower knobs and soft-close drawers. The side cabinet has the option of mirrored doors or ostrich leather inserts. An ostrich leather bench completes the collection. Flanking the mirror are Inertia sconces by Corbett Lighting. These are hand-crafted iron, finished with silver leaf. The aged silver chandelier, which hangs over the tub, is from Possini Euro Lighting.

The shower features marble tiles, custom laser-cut to illustrate inspiring words, including 'renew and refresh.' These motivating words add a quirky touch. Overall, this bathroom is an indulgent retreat and a beautiful sanctuary.

TOTO®

WHIMSICAL, FUN + TINY

The large 18x36-inch tiles are used as an accent behind the TOTO dual flush toilet.

This 35-square-foot bathroom required a creative solution to maximize the space. Although tub/shower combos don't often provide a relaxing experience, combining them was a must. An extra-deep TOTO cast iron tub was the perfect solution. It's so large, you can practically swim in it! It features a slip-resistant surface and adding a tile ledge helps with getting in and out.

TOTO Soiree bath faucets and hand shower (on a gliding rail) emphasize the contemporary look of the bathroom. Matching TOTO Soiree faucets were used at the sink as well. Italian porcelain tiles from the Fusion collection by Midgley West were an outstanding choice for the floors and walls. By using the same tile for the floor, wall and ceiling, the bathroom appears much larger. The 1x6-inch mosaic tiles are the feature and the large 18x36-inch tiles are used as an accent behind the TOTO dual-flush toilet.

To bring this bathroom to life, Pantone towels in bright zesty green and pure snow white accent the space and are a contrast to the Benjamin Moore Midnight Oil wall paint. Whimsical accessories such as shower curtain hooks that read 'Wash Your Hands' and 'Brush Your Teeth' were sourced from Home Outfitters.

To provide more space within the bathroom, a barn door was used rather than a traditional swing door. This door slides on exterior mounted hardware and changes the style of the bathroom significantly. It also allowed us to add towel storage in wall-mounted chrome baskets and provide a small shelf for plants. ♦

picture-perfect POWDER ROOMS

The smallest room in the house is a playground for daring design choices

BY DVIRA OVADIA

on't let a petite powder room discourage you from being creative; even small spaces deserve a stylish look. The powder room consists of five main essentials: vanity, mirror, lights, toilet and envelope (aka floors and walls).

Sometimes, these essentials are simple at best, mainly white and borderline-boring. However, that doesn't have to be the case. I have decorated many small-scale bathrooms and created a wow-factor by emphasizing luxury with bold colours and eye-catching fixtures.

—» TIPS «—

A closed cabinet will house your toiletries and hand towels. Use baskets, bins and shelves to store guest amenities in an open cabinet.

Create an element of surprise and wow your guests with a wall-mounted faucet, a trough sink or a fabulous piece of artwork.

Little things like sumptuous hand towels, fresh-cut flowers, and beautiful accessories not only pack a punch but also welcome your guests.

CHOOSING YOUR VANITY AND FAUCET

The vanity is the first thing you notice when entering the powder room and acts as an anchor. Invest in a nice piece that draws the eye. I often use freestanding vanities to make powder rooms feel more like decorated rooms.

A contemporary, open vanity with a marble base provides lightness. On the other hand, don't be afraid to integrate a repainted, antique vanity into your powder room. Complementary-painted or patterned wallpaper allows even heavier pieces to blend seamlessly into small spaces.

Stand-alone pedestal sinks come in classic or modern designs and are usually less expensive than traditional vanities. However, some pedestal sinks offer very little counter space, making it necessary to include an additional stand-alone table for toiletries.

Consider the faucets: they should be beautiful and striking. Today, faucets are available in many fabulous shapes and finishes. Opt for black, bronze or brass and avoid the everyday standard chrome faucets. Sleek and less elaborate faucets allow an ornate vanity to shine; however, the faucet can also be the crown jewel.

Prior to choosing a faucet, consider whether you're fitting a new faucet on an existing sink or buying a new vanity and sink assembly. Make sure the faucet you choose matches the hole-openings in your sink.

For the average person, hang the mirror 62 to 66 inches from the floor measured from the centre line.

A chandelier or a pair of sconces on either side of the mirror is like jewelry on a dress.

THE RIGHT MIRROR

When decorating your powder room, the mirror should not be an afterthought. It should stand out and act as a design element in the room. Frameless, bevelled or etched mirrors can be stunning in a small space but they are trickier to install.

Framed mirrors are less expensive and easier to hang. Large mirrors or even a wall of mirrors behind the vanity, gives the illusion of more space; whereas, a tiny mirror can make the room appear even smaller. Just make sure when hanging your mirror that it's hung to accommodate all heights.

THE ENVELOPE

A small powder room is the perfect place for adding wallpaper that creates a visual impact, as it adds drama to a small space. Don't be afraid to use dark, bright, or even busy wallpaper; it will create a mood and set the tone. Just remember to choose paper that complements and enhances the style of your vanity and fixtures.

The powder room is usually the smallest room in the house but it will often experience the most traffic. Granite, marble, ceramic and slate are popular choices that offer an upscale look. You might also choose to run the same hardwood from the hall into the powder room for a more unified flow.

LIGHTING YOUR SPACE

Powder rooms are generally tucked into hallways without natural light. Consider a ceiling fixture and sconces. The appropriate lighting adds sparkle and shine.

A chandelier or a pair of sconces on either side of the mirror is like jewelry on a dress. Go ahead and choose lighting that's a little more flamboyant or prettier than what you might choose for the main bathroom. Keep in mind, the lighting should match the style of the room.

The scale of your powder room might be smaller but that doesn't mean you can't make a bold statement. Unleash your imagination. The powder room is the perfect place to be daring with design. ♦

GREEN in DISGUISE

BY CASSANDRA NORDELL-MACLEAN • PHOTOGRAPHY BY GERALD MABEE

Style and sustainability result in an award-winning kitchen

By applying the rules of social and ethical design principals, this functional, eco-friendly kitchen was created without sacrificing an ounce of style. As a result, the project took home the NKBA award, Ontario chapter, in the Green Design category earlier this year.

Using all the latest in green technology and a striking design, it cannot be pigeonholed into the stereotypical green category. All of the products used promote sustainability through above-average durability, manufacturing methods, lifetime warranty, and were made using environmentally responsible practices—regulated indoor air quality, resource management and recycled content.

WHY GREEN?

According to the Canadian Lung Association and the California Air Resource Board, harmful toxins, such as formaldehyde, can contribute to eye, skin, respiratory issues, asthma and allergic conditions. More than 200-parts-per-billion formaldehyde is present in new homes.

In this house, formaldehyde emissions and harmful toxins have been kept as low as possible. All indoor air quality offenders were identified, as well as products that come from a great distance resulting in a poor carbon footprint.

ON THE STYLE FRONT

I envisioned the design with a bold, masculine influence; a space that would invoke the feeling of luxury and elegance, and withstand the everyday wear-and-tear that a young family can dish out.

The linear floor plan was a challenge; the solution was a custom-designed banquette near the patio door and tall custom cabinetry that rounded the corner, creating an L-shape around the island. The cabinets were painted in a warm grey to fit the design concept and to provide a welcoming feel. The cabinet door style is a new twist on a traditional shaker style.

An off-white quartz countertop, beautifully veined with warm grey, perfectly contrasts and complements the custom cabinetry. Although it rivals the look of marble, maintenance-free quartz stands up to use; it does not stain and does not need to be sealed.

The uniquely shaped white-tile backsplash pairs nicely with the warm-grey grout to offset the white tile and tie into the warm-grey cabinetry. The backsplash adds texture and answers the need for an easy-to-clean, smooth surface, while the durable, warm-grey matte flooring blends into the palette created by the cabinetry, countertops, and backsplash.

Where a traditional table would have inhibited the use of the patio door, the banquette enhances the flow of the kitchen and keeps occupants away from the traffic flow area. Now there's convenient access to the barbecue.

Sumptuous grey fabric was chosen for the banquette to provide comfort and to balance the space. Floor-to-ceiling storage was created on the right side of the kitchen. The richly painted, deep-navy surround with recessed niches unites the elegant space; the sills are made from quartz to match the countertop and add durability.

The kitchen's main prep area, the island, also maximizes the function of the space. Flowing clockwise, items taken out of the fridge can be placed on the left side of the island for washing before being moved to the right side for chopping, and a simple turn allows the items to be transferred to pots or pans on the stove for cooking. A two-bin garbage/recycle pullout in the island makes clean-up easier, and its placement in the cabinet nearest the garage door ensures the shortest distance for taking out the trash.

GREEN HIGHLIGHTS

The project utilized an active on-site recycling program for plastic, glass, paper and cardboard. All leftover materials were donated where possible to eliminate putting them in a landfill. The custom cabinetry is CARB 2-compliant and recognized by the Kitchen Cabinet Manufacturer's Association's Environmental Stewardship Program. It features a low VOC, no-formaldehyde-added paint finish for better indoor air quality.

Likewise, the Canadian plywood uses a soy-based resin and doesn't contain added formaldehyde or pollutants. In addition, the custom cabinetry featured intense craftsmanship with a lifetime warranty, promoting sustainability through longevity. Cabinet door construction featured MDF, a recycled wood product.

The flooring is FSC- and CARB-compliant engineered hardwood, meeting the strictest indoor air regulations for not off-gassing harmful toxins.

The Kohler cast iron sink is made from 83 per cent recycled material and is meant to last for life.

The Kohler Sensate touchless faucet is made of solid brass for long life and durability. It features a lifetime warranty and conserves water. Its response time of 20 milliseconds minimizes the amount of water wasted. Temperature memory allows faucet to be turned on and off at the temperature set during prior usage.

The Dacor fridge and dishwasher are certified Energy Star. The induction cooktop can detect the presence and size of cookware and matches energy transference with no residual heat loss.

The paint used on the walls is zero VOC water-based paint, and the solid-birch Canadian-made kitchen table is stained with a low VOC-finish.

The countertop and recessed niche sills have a lifetime warranty. The quartz is radon-free and GREENGUARD-certified for Indoor Air Quality.

Every product that touched this project exemplifies what it means to be green, healthy and sustainable, and without compromising the design esthetic. Equally important, this is now a comfortable and functional space for family and friends to gather. ♦

BUDGETING for BEAUTY

When you ask a contractor for a quote on a renovation project, he or she will usually give you a price range rather than a specific amount. Part of the reason for that is to build in some buffer for the inevitable unknowns that come up on a job: like when you open up a wall and find a pipe or wiring that wasn't supposed to be there and it has to get rerouted.

But the main reason for the range is that there can be a huge difference in the price of the various "finishes" on a project. I know how much the 2x4s, drywall, and plumbing parts are going to cost me to install a new bathroom, but I don't know what kind of toilet, tile, or light fixtures you want to use. Someone on a tight budget might opt for a simple ceramic tile that costs less than $1 a square foot, but you can easily spend $20 or more per square foot for tiles made from natural stone.

Every room in your house has countless different items you'll have to make decisions about. How many potlights do you want? Hardwood, carpet, or tile for the floors? If you go with tile, do you want to have it heated? Do you want to include a fireplace insert in the basement family room to take the chill off on winter nights? (For more on fireplaces, radiant floor heating, and other options see, "The Heat is On" on page 66.)

For each item, there's usually a good, better, and best option. If you end up choosing a lot of betters and bests, your final bill will go up.

Finish with furnishing

Once you've spent all that money on a renovation—particularly if it's an addition—you're going to want to furnish it. We probably all know someone who is "house poor;" they bought the biggest place that they could afford, but most of the rooms are empty because they don't have any money left for tables and chairs. And don't forget that when the contractor leaves, you'll have pristine walls waiting to be decorated with art.

If you know your tastes will veer to the high-end on the finishes and furnishings you'll want to factor these costs into your overall budget. If it looks like you're going to need more money than you have access to, you might want to consider scaling back the scope of the project up front. That way, in the end, you won't be disappointed with spacious new rooms where you had to cheap out on a number of items or that you can't afford to furnish.

JIM'S PICK

A gas fireplace insert, such as the STARfire 52 model from Napoleon, does double-duty as a secondary heating source and a stunning focal point for a room.

the HEAT IS ON

Canadian climates call for more than one way to bring heat into your home

BY JIM CARUK

Here in Ontario, most homes are primarily heated with either a forced-air furnace or boiler that's connected to hot-water radiators throughout the house. But there are a number of different supplemental heating options to consider.

The age-old choice is a wood fireplace. I've written before about that primal feeling we get staring into a fire, listening to it crackle and pop. But wood fires certainly aren't as popular as they used to be, in large part because of the hassle. You have to buy and store firewood, you need to have your chimney cleaned regularly, and there's all the messy ash to dispose of. If you do install or need to maintain a wood-burning fireplace, make sure the contractor is WETT-certified (Wood Energy Technology Transfer).

The modern alternative is to install a gas fireplace, or an insert that fits into an existing fireplace. You can't put one just anywhere. The exhaust gases need to be vented to the outside, for one, and bylaws regarding how far they have to be from neighbouring windows and the property line can limit your options, particularly with tightly packed houses in the city. They also have to be constructed with specific setbacks from combustible materials.

But there is an almost endless selection of styles and designs that can fit almost any budget. In the end, you get instant heat and flame at the touch of a button, without any mess. There are also electric versions that give off heat and mimic—some better than others—the look of a flickering flame.

With either, you don't get that smoke smell, though that would be considered an upside for many. If you're really keen on a more-natural experience, I do know that you can buy candles that smell like a campfire!

In-floor radiant heating is a great way to heat a room, particularly a bathroom with tile flooring. The options range from water-filled piping that snakes back-and-forth below the subfloor and is connected to a boiler, to mats of electric cable that you control with a room-specific thermostat.

We all know from high school physics that heat rises. When you add in that it's already below ground, it's no wonder that basement rooms often feel colder than the rest of the house. If you're building new or digging down your foundation, it's a great opportunity to embed radiant heating right into the slab or subfloor.

If that's not in the budget, the cheaper upfront option is to install electric baseboard heaters along the basement walls. Keep in mind that while the heaters themselves are relatively cheap, electricity is one of the most expensive ways to heat a house, and the cost of your hydro bills is only going to go up. Rather than leaving them cranked full-blast around the clock, consider just turning them on when you need them.

Don't forget your outdoor living spaces as well. For years, bars and restaurants have been extending their patio season with exterior heaters. Now, there are a number of residential-style models available that can be fueled with either refillable propane tanks (like you use on your barbecue) or connected directly to your home's natural gas line.

There are also propane and natural gas firepits for that campfire feel in your backyard. For something more authentic (read: the smoky smell and crackle of the fire), consider a wood-burning firepit or a chiminea. Note that some municipalities prohibit backyard fires. If you do opt for a wood-burning firepit, make sure you also have a mesh screen to put over it so an errant ash doesn't set your home up in smoke. ♦

Nature's BEST

Gardens are a link to nature and crucial to a healthy eco-system

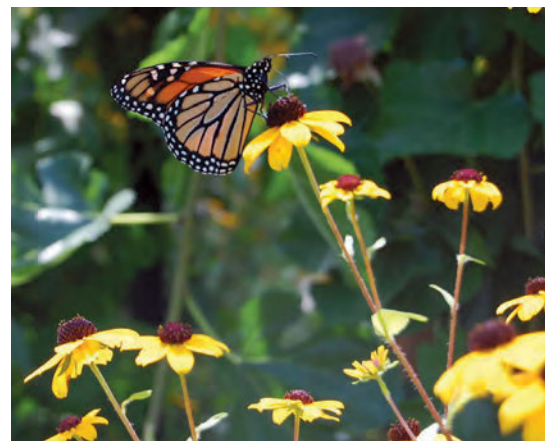

MARK CULLEN

The purpose of a garden is to link us to the natural world around us. In the microcosm of our personal space we each see our yard, balcony, and garden as something different. Your definition of that space may be 'a place to entertain,' or 'relax,' or 'escape,' and you would be right. But stand back from your own personal needs and wants and realize what makes the outdoor space around your home different from your indoor space is that it is not yours at all.

Consider the birds, insects and wind that pass through your yard every day. Each holds a free pass to use your place to feed, live, reproduce, and in the case of the wind itself, to just pass by.

What is so exciting about gardening today is the growing realization that we do not do it alone: everything that we do in our yards and gardens impacts the natural world around us.

FOOD WEBS

There is a lot more going on in our yard than our powers of observation allow us to connect with. For instance, the 'food chain' was once thought to be a linear illustration of how we function within the rules of Mother Nature, but this is an over-simplification of how things really work. Ecologists now talk about food webs, not chains.

Not only in your own backyard but on a global scale, we now know that gardeners provide an impact that is changing the world. To stand at your kitchen window and observe birds, flowers, a deck, and barbecue, and to see nothing more is to rob yourself of the benefits of reality. In the garden we often see things two-dimensionally.

Did you know that in a single handful of quality-garden soil there exist over 4 billion interdependent living organisms? Bacteria, fungi, protozoa, insects, and a cocktail of other stuff, work together to create a support system for the plants that grow in your garden. As a result of this complex system, we impact the natural world every time we dig a hole, pull a weed, or place a bird feeder on our property.

ARE YOU DOING YOUR PART?

If you agree that gardeners (and there are over 20 million of us in Canada) have a vital role to play where ecological preservation and enhancement is concerned, then this is how each of us can do more to enhance that ecosystem.

1 ATTRACT POLLINATORS Plants produce flowers in an effort to attract pollinators. Exchanging pollen and nectar for sustenance ensures that both the plant and the pollinator have a future.

Plant lots of flowering plants.

Use plants that attract butterflies, hummingbirds, song birds and yes, even moths, certain types of wasps, and mason bees. Place a mason bee house about two metres off the ground and out of the wind.

Put out bird feeders including hummingbird feeders. Squish an overripe banana with a fork onto a dish and place it outside to attract butterflies. Mix up your bird food to include peanuts, black oil sunflowers, nyjer seed, and quality millet.

Water. Provide a drink and a bath for visiting wildlife. You will never know the degree to which a bird bath gets used, especially while you sleep.

2 GROW A VARIETY OF TREES AND SHRUBS AND VINES

These permanent additions to your garden support the wildlife that frequents herbaceous perennials and annuals through the production of foliage, flowers, and berries.

3 LEAVE A PILE OF BRUSH OR FIRE WOOD TO ROT IN A CORNER OF YOUR YARD

You will likely want this out of sight, which is fine. The insects that the decaying materials attract also attract birds and other predators that feed on them. Think food 'web' not 'chain.'

4 COMPOST Your soil will improve as you harvest the finished stuff from your composting unit or pile and it will host small creatures that are all beneficial to your garden. If you get the odd visit from a raccoon, better that they frequent your composter than your attic. They just may turn the raw material over and save you the trouble.

Go ahead and leave your garden a little bit messy. By that I mean, leave your grass clippings on the lawn, let the leaves that fall in autumn remain on your garden, and allow some of your flowering plants to go to seed after flowering. They will provide a quality source of food for songbirds later in the season.

I am relieved that we, as Canadian gardeners, have matured to the point where we no longer fight what happens naturally in the world around us. Instead we have a new generation of gardeners (and an old one that is learning!) who are embracing the idea that our gardens are a natural link to the wild world that is outside of our property lines and inside them as well. ♦

CONSTRUCTIVE CONSTRUCTION

Work with a pro and renovate with confidence

BY BRYAN TUCKEY

Renovating your home is a big undertaking. It takes time, effort and it's a big investment.

We did a homeowner survey in January that showed environmental consciousness and energy savings as top motivators for home renovations this year. The survey asked how homeowners would spend $100,000 during a renovation and 80 per cent reported an interest in saving on utility costs while 68 per cent claimed to be interested in environmentally friendly improvements. In the renovation sector, that can mean upgrading windows and doors, replacing insulation, and even retrofitting your home's plumbing and electrical systems.

Measures to improve a home can quickly go beyond what you can do on your own. When you work with a professional renovator, you can renovate with confidence knowing that you're working with someone who understands the rules and regulations that go along with home construction.

Professionals like the RenoMark renovator and trade contractor members of our Association have a strong knowledge of municipal by-laws as well as the Ontario Building Code—two very detailed sets of rules that guide projects large and small. They also abide by the Association's Code of Ethics and a renovator-specific Code of Conduct, which you can view at renomark.ca.

“WHEN YOU
WORK WITH A PROFESSIONAL
RENOVATOR, YOU CAN RENOVATE WITH CONFIDENCE...”

As part of their work to advocate for their clients and consumers in general, some of our renovator members meet with municipal staff and local councilors to educate them and provide real-time examples of project demands and how process delays can affect timelines. It's important to understand that most home renovations will require municipal building permits and a professional renovator can assist in acquiring them.

They will also coordinate and schedule a team of trades that work on different aspects of your home at different times. A delay in permit approvals can cost time and money. Our members work with the city to improve the communication flow and keep projects on schedule and on budget.

With increasing property values in the GTA, many people are choosing to stay and renovate their current home instead of moving. Renovation spending increases on average 7 per cent each year across Canada, according to a TD Economic report. Renovation is also a significant driver of the local economy since products are sourced locally and the businesses are housed locally.

There are many reasons homeowners decide that it's time to renovate. Working with a professional can help you make the right decisions to increase the comfort and value of your home. Search our database of professional RenoMark renovators by geography and by project type at renomark.ca.

THE LAND DOWN UNDER

BY BRENDAN CHARTERSPHOTOGRAPHY BY ANDREW SNOW

Cost per square foot drives
Torontonians below the grass-line

Clean, organized and concealed – making laundry less of a chore.

For post workouts, or for overnight guests, a full washroom is a basement benefit.

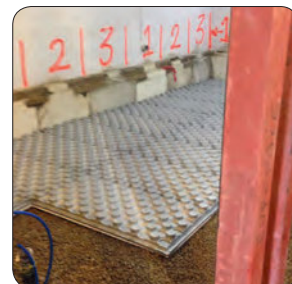

A push to curb urban sprawl has created unprecedented vertical development in many of Toronto's older neighbourhoods. As the cost of a single-family dwelling goes up, homeowners are now looking down on the solution to find more living space. Although you are less likely to see the activity happening below ground, rest assured it too is a busy place.

Historically, our northern climate has dictated the need to protect buildings from the damaging effects of frost. As a result, this deep soil excavation to protect footings created cold and damp crawl spaces for housing mechanical equipment to service the home. In some cases, they became crude laundry rooms, as well as catchalls for smelly hockey gear, generations of memorabilia, and boxes of seasonal decorations.

In the search for additional living space, Torontonians began to push down, lowering and finishing basements, to create everything from a recreation space, to guest bedrooms, nanny or in-law suites, teenage lairs, or even revenue-creating secondary suites. The issue is that most of these basements, with much lower ceiling heights, were not designed for these uses.

At Eurodale Developments, one of our most frequent projects now is to dig out, lower and convert these uninhabitable spaces into warm, dry, comfortable and tall living areas.

Before you can move the big-screen TV down to your newly created basement for the Super Bowl, there are a few labour-intensive processes required.

Underpinned foundation and insulation await in-floor hydronic tubing for an efficient and comfortable basement.

UNDERPINNING Digging under the foundation walls in three to four-foot sections, extending the structural wall down in a straight line for the desired ceiling height.

BENCH CURB Digging down and pouring a curb, often at a 1:1 ratio of depth to width of the curb, to lower the foundation while maintaining the existing load transfer. For a two-foot drop, you lose two feet of interior floor space—a cheaper option, but can steal valuable floor area.

ANGLE OF REPOSE This is the angle of load transfer that gravity pulls down on your home, and transfers from your footings. Don't dig right beside (straight down from) a footing without engineer review. Typical angles to be maintained from the footing are 7:10 or 1:1, depending on the soil type and compressive strength; otherwise, you could destabilize your existing home.

WATERPROOFING Always best addressed from the exterior (though a more costly endeavour), it can also be treated effectively from inside, if necessary. Interior dimpled membrane, weeping tile, crushed stone, vapour barrier and a sump pump are required to make the space a dry living area, and are a code requirement. Upgrade to a double pump with battery backup, or a water-charged venturi style pump to avoid issues when the power fails during a big storm, which is becoming more common.

DRAINS When you lower the floor, you will also need to replace all the drains under the floor. Backflow preventers are now code to stop a flood of sewage that can be caused by intense super storms (think back to Toronto in 2013). Also, depending on the height of the city drain, a grinder pit and pump (sewage ejector) may be required. We recommend tying the upper levels in with normal gravity feed, and only tying the new lower basement drains into the pump, reducing risk of a flood if the pump ever fails.

NEIGHBOURS Digging deeper than your neighbours' footing may cause issues for them—check the distance between the homes and the depth of their basement and remember that angle of repose for their footings too.

RADON This odourless gas is a carcinogen and may be lurking below your slab. Test for it and rough-in to vent against it before you pour your slab to ensure the health of everyone inside. This can be a cheap measure that saves a life.

HEATING We highly recommend tossing the hot water tank and upgrading to a mini boiler for on-demand hot water, plus running tubes from it to heat your new slab. It also hangs from the wall and can save even more critical floor space.

Recreation, guests or income can all be comfortably derived from this modern renovated basement.

INSULATION To ensure mould is never an issue, use non-cellulose-based insulation. We prefer to use two-pound spray foam for this reason; its high R-value per inch maximizes efficiency and has a built-in vapour barrier. Roxul (stone wool) is also a great solution for this, with lower cost but slightly lower insulating properties.

LIGHTING Think about required natural egress (escape windows) and lots of lighting to make the space feel less like a basement. Recessed LEDs are space- and energy-efficient and perfect for lighting these below-grade spaces.

FINISHES Basements are unique places and may require a different set of finishes than you have on the main floor. We recommend finishes that deal better with humid environments, or with at least the proper separation (like subfloors and waterproof membranes) to ensure a lasting healthy environment.

THE TORONTO REAL ESTATE BOARD (TREB) REPORTS THE AVERAGE PRICE OF AN ABODE IN TORONTO PROPER IS APPROXIMATELY $640,000. AND A DETACHED HOUSE IN THE 416 HAS NOW ECLIPSED A COOL MILLION DOLLARS.

This is just a sampler of what you need to consider when creating additional living space in an older basement. Yet, when it's finished, you will have added 50 per cent of the original square footage of a typical two-storey home.

For an 800- to 1,000-square-foot basement commonly found in Toronto, costs can vary dramatically. Underpinning and finishing projects can range from $75,000-$150,000, depending on the final design. However, the investment to add space below the grass-line may be a relative bargain compared to the cost of buying a larger home. ♦

Garage Organization Tips from Carson Arthur

1. Get everything off the ground! Being able to see the entire floor makes a room more spacious. Utilize wall storage and accessory systems like the Gladiator® GearTrack Pack to get awkward items like bicycles, rakes and shovels up and out of the way.
2. Paint the floor or add garage floor tiles. Seeing as much of the floor as possible is key to visually maximizing your garage, but no one wants to see a floor covered in stains.
3. Hide the sports gear! Too often the garage becomes the home of bulky sports gear like hockey bags or golf clubs. Look for units like the Gladiator® Premier Tall GearBox to hide these items behind closed doors.
4. Add light! The biggest downfall of most garages is the lack of light. Add light fixtures to keep your garage bright.
5. Customize to meet your family needs. Having the ability to customize your storage solutions is key to making any space meet your needs.

Don't miss Carson Arthur live at the Show on the Main Stage Oct 2nd & 3rd, plus special guest appearance at the Gladiator® GarageWorks booth.

City Smart Living

Explore small spaces and simple living at the Toronto Fall Home Show! These living and kitchen spaces embrace small space living and are overflowing with tips and solutions for small spaces and the condo lifestyle.

Here's a few of the 101 small space tips:

- Lacking natural light in your kitchen? Consider using reflective light-coloured surfaces in high-gloss lacquer, lacquered glass, and gloss acrylics to bounce the light throughout the space.
- Forget big and clunky, choose slim, stylish, minimal and modern furnishings. The clean lines on furniture can ensure your space feels much larger than it actually is. A glass dining table or coffee tables helps lines of sight to give the same illusion of larger space.
- To maximize the storage space of sink units, consider deep drawer sink units with a top drawer designed to fit around the bowl and ideal for storing cleaning supplies, and a bottom drawer to easily accommodate waste, recycling and organic bins.
- Increase countertop space, consider units with a built-in pull out table function.
- Maximize storage and go vertical. Have the shelves go all the way up and this applies to the kitchen as well. If you keep them tidy and just have one wall of shelving it won't overwhelm or clutter the space.
- Choose kitchen appliances with dual functions to save on space, but not compromise design.
- Find furniture that does more than one function.
- To make your space appear larger, avoid darker hues.

Destination Renovation

Renovation CONVERSATION

Early on in the renovation process it's helpful to talk to contractors without any obligation, and that's where Renovation Conversation comes in. Throughout the Fall Home Show, our professional RenoMark™ contractors will be on hand to talk to you on an informal basis about your renovation plans. This is your chance to get ballpark estimates, discuss material selection, ask how long different projects take, etc.

Renovation INSPIRATION

This aspect of Destination Renovation is a photo gallery of 70 professional renovations of all types and budgets done by BILD members competing for our annual Renovation & Custom Home Builder Awards. The display boards feature "before" and "after" photos and a brief project description. There are categories for renovations in various price ranges, spanning from under $75,000 to over $500,000, plus several custom homes. The photos are beyond stunning!

Renovation INFORMATION

The final component of Destination Renovation is a wealth of free literature on the renovation process, including our popular RenoGuide: Five steps to a worry-free renovation or addition; the Homeowners Guide to Green Renovations; and perhaps most importantly, a complete listing of BILD member renovation contractors (also available in searchable database format on www.renomark.ca)

COOK CLEAN COOL

Design your perfect dream kitchen with the innovative and sleek Fisher & Paykel comprehensive kitchen line

Since 1934, the Fisher & Paykel design heritage has been founded on a pioneering spirit and culture of curiosity that challenges conventional appliance design to consistently deliver products tailored for human needs. Fisher & Paykel Appliances, Inc., a global design innovator and manufacturer of indoor and outdoor home appliances, offers a comprehensive collection to satisfy all of your kitchen wants and needs. For every task in your kitchen, Fisher & Paykel appliances have you covered by offering a full lineup of ranges, gas cooktops, ovens, hoods, built-in and freestanding refrigeration as well as drawers, and the iconic DishDrawer.

For chefs of any level, Fisher & Paykel offers a new Flush Gas on Steel Cooktop (launched 2015) which provides a fully flush countertop design featuring burners recessed into the kitchen work surface that offers an uncluttered and integrated environment, as well as featuring premium design and durability. The Flush Gas on Steel Cooktop features five different burners with a variety of strengths. The uniform flame and even-heat distribution of the dual-flame wok burner, combined with highly responsive dials and Innovalve Technology, offer precise heat adjustment that perfects the slow simmer for sauces to the intense heat required for searing steaks and wok cooking.

Offering Wall Ovens for any space, each Fisher & Paykel oven has ten cooking modes including self-clean and AeroTech™ cooking system which make it the ultimate in cooking technology and convenience. Combine all this with its clean lines, stylish machined metals and electronic illumination, and these ovens strike the perfect balance between form and function.

As pioneers of the world's first drawer dishwasher, DishDrawer™ Dishwashers; Fisher & Paykel continues to pave the way for appliance innovation. This ergonomic solution to dishwashing, with a brushed stainless steel finish, offers kitchen design flexibility and superior results.

In 2015, to add to their collection of refrigeration options, including the freestanding and the CoolDrawer, Fisher & Paykel now offers a brand new Built-in Refrigerator that comes in three sizes, including 72", 80" and 84", with a sleek design that offers easy installation, and a flush fit that promises to compliment kitchen cabinetry, in either stainless steel or custom panel finishes. These ActiveSmart™ refrigerators intelligently adapt to daily use to help save energy, cooling and defrosting only as needed, without compromising on food care. As a result, the Fisher & Paykel Built-in series carries an Energy Star Most Efficient rating. The Cool-Drawer™ multi-temperature drawer has been designed to change from refrigerator to freezer at the touch of a button. It is built on the concept of distributed refrigeration, combining ActiveSmart technology with a drawer-based design that can be placed anywhere in the kitchen, home or entertainment area.
